

BUSINESS

Retiree group says Liberal budget fails to support pension reform

By David Paddon The Canadian Press
Tue., April 20, 2021 | 1 min. read

TORONTO - The Canadian Federation of Pensioners is calling for amendments to federal insolvency laws to protect members of defined benefit pensions if the employer is insolvent.

The federation, which represents 23 retiree groups with a total of about 300,000 members, renewed its call for legislative changes after the federal budget failed to mention the issue on Monday.

The story includes comments from Michael Powell, President, Canadian Federation of Pensioners. To read the full story, please visit the Toronto Star